In the winter, escape from the Northern Hemisphere and head south to the peaceful depths of Chilean Patagonia. When areas of North America, such as Montana, are wrapped in a mantle of cold and snow, Chilean Patagonia basks in spring and summer warmth.

Chile is one of the safest, most friendly, yet isolated and hauntingly beautiful regions of the world. And Coyhaique, the capital town of the Chilean Patagonia region, is easily reachable. After only a 3 hour flight south from Santiago to the Balmaceda airport, you can be here, fly fishing in our paradise.

With us you will enjoy our Patagonian culture as much as the quality of our world-class Fly Fishing in Chile.

The season at Cinco Rios Chile runs from the first of November through the first week of May. The word awesome could very well have been created to try to describe this spot in the depths of the incredible Patagonian Andes

Cinco Rios Chile surprises because of its diversity; it combines the best of Chilean fisheries; from the meandering spring creeks of the Patagonic Pampas, to the crystal clear waters of the western rainforest. All surrounded with spectacular mountains and peaks, heavily encased in glaciers, surrounding you protectively like a parent's cape, creating a very unique and picturesque ambient that allow visitors to experience the trip of a life time.

Out of Cinco Rios our guests fish for wild brown and rainbow trout, as well as king and Coho Salmon. We are proud of the all we have to offer; fascinating landscapes; a world class fishery; luxurious accommodations; and gourmet Chilean food; a fine selection of Chilean wines and beverages (included); and very experienced and bilingual guides.
